Section 72.030 of the Government Code requires the Office of Court Administration (OCA) to collect data relating to judicial turnover and the reasons for that turnover. The report must also include findings comparing the compensation of Texas' state judges with compensation of judges at corresponding levels in the five states closest in population and to lawyers engaged in private practice. A report containing this information is to be released no later than December 1 of each even-numbered year. This report contains the information required by Section 72.030, updating the information presented in the last judicial turnover report issued in 2016.

Turnover Falls but Retirements Increase

The judicial turnover rate for the fiscal year 2016-2017 biennium was 12 percent, with 68 appellate and district judges leaving the state judiciary. Thirty-six of those judges left voluntarily, for a voluntary turnover rate of 6.4 percent.

The most significant factors in judges' decisions to leave were retirement and salary. The percentage of judges retiring reached a 14-year high; however, most of these judges intended to continue working as a visiting judge or in the private sector.

Judicial Compensation Continues to Lag Behind Other States

Texas state judges last received an increase in state compensation in September 2013, the first increase since 2005. State judges in the five other most populous states have received increases in salary since 2013.

In addition, the salaries of Texas judges continued to lag the salaries of judges at corresponding levels in all five of those states. The state salary of Texas judges is at least 29 percent lower than the average salary of their counterparts in the five other states.

Salary Summary for State Judges as of September 1, 2018

Judge	State Salary	Maximum County Supplement	Maximum Compensation
Justice/Judge ¹ – Supreme Court or Court of Criminal Appeals	$168,000	N/A	$168,000
Justice ² – Court of Appeals	$154,000	up to $9,000	$163,000
District Judge	$140,000	up to $18,000	$158,000

Compensation for Judges Lags Behind Attorneys, Even with Much More Experience

According to data collected by the Texas Workforce Commission (TWC) for its Texas Wages and Employment Projections, the statewide average salary for an experienced lawyer in 2017 was $184,156, and the average salary for all lawyers was $145,799. TWC defines experienced workers as the wage earned by the upper two-thirds of all workers in the selected occupation.

The state-funded portion of salaries for district judges is less than the average salary for lawyers statewide and significantly less than the average salary for an experienced lawyer. Even though over half of Texas’ judges have been licensed attorneys for more than 30 years, no judge is paid a salary that matches the average salary for experienced lawyers in the state.

² The Chief Justice receives an additional $2,500 in state compensation.

Extent of Turnover in the Judiciary

During the 2016-2017 biennium, 565 judges served in the state’s appellate and district courts. During this period, 68 judges left the state judiciary—a turnover rate of 12 percent. However, 44 judges left involuntarily, primarily due to defeat in a primary or general election. The voluntary turnover rate was 6.4 percent.

Turnover of State Appellate and District Judges September 1, 2015 through August 31, 2017

	Number of Judges	Percentage of All Judges
Total Number of Appellate and District Judge Positions	565
Judges Leaving State Judiciary	68	12.0 %
Judges Leaving State Judiciary Voluntarily	36	6.4 %

Deceased	1	1 %	0.2 %
Total	68	100 %	12.0 %

³ Totals to 12.1% due to rounding.

In the last biennium, the voluntary turnover rate fell to the lowest level since the 2004-2005 period, while the involuntary turnover rate increased slightly.

Over the last four biennia, the percentage of judges leaving office by not seeking reelection has remained steady, while the percentage leaving by resignation declined. In the 2016/17 biennium, 40 percent of judges who left the judiciary were defeated in an election.⁴

Survey of Judges Who Voluntarily Left State Judicial Office

To determine why judges left state judicial office, the Office of Court Administration regularly surveys judges for the factors influencing their decision.⁵ The results of the surveys for the 2016-2017 biennium are below.

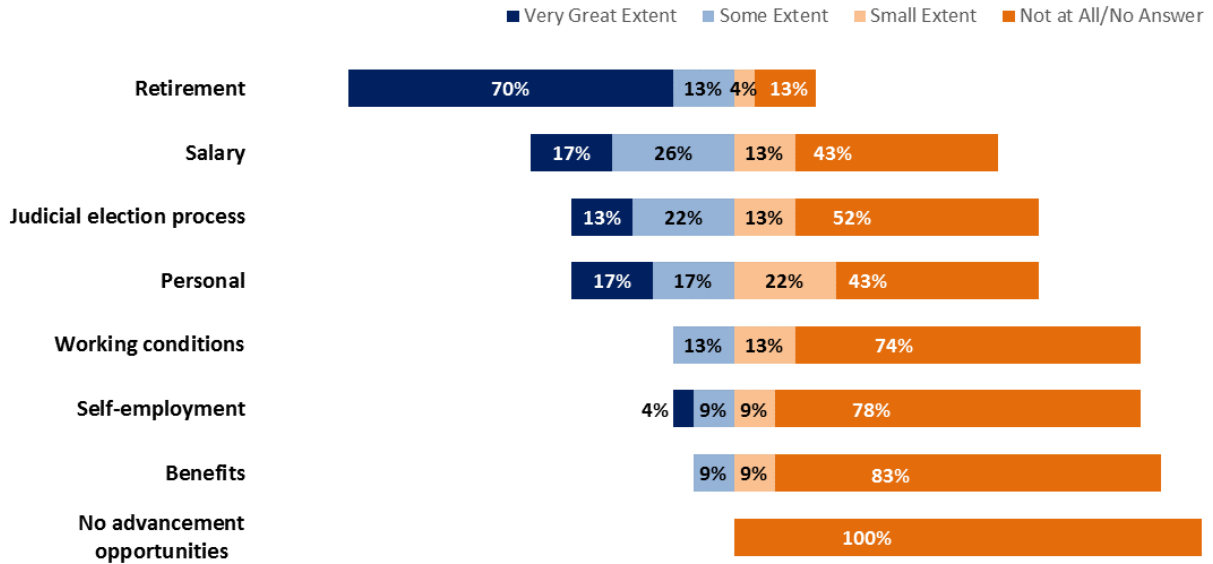

Which Factor(s) Influenced Your Decision?

The most significant factors in judges' decisions to leave state judicial office were retirement and salary.

⁴ See Appendix B for the number of judges in each category.

⁵ The methodology for the survey can be found in Appendix A.

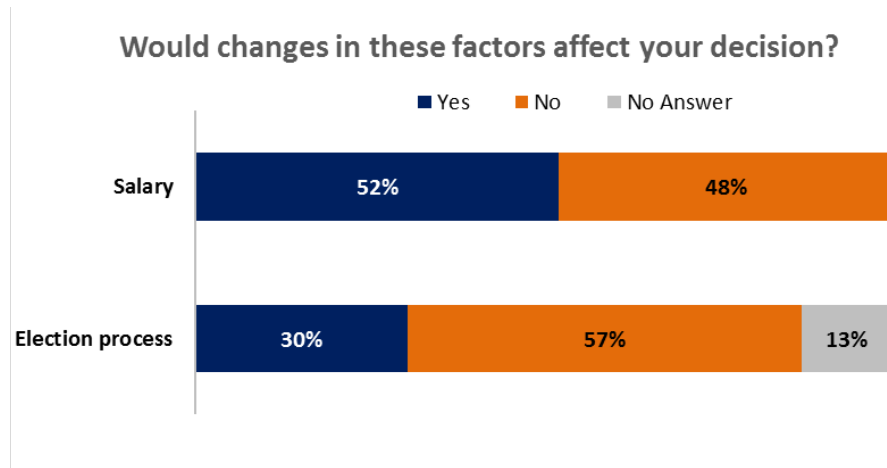

Factors Influencing Judges' Decision

The percentage of judges indicating that retirement was a significant factor was the highest in the last 14 years, which likely explains the decrease in the percentage of judges naming salary as a significant factor.

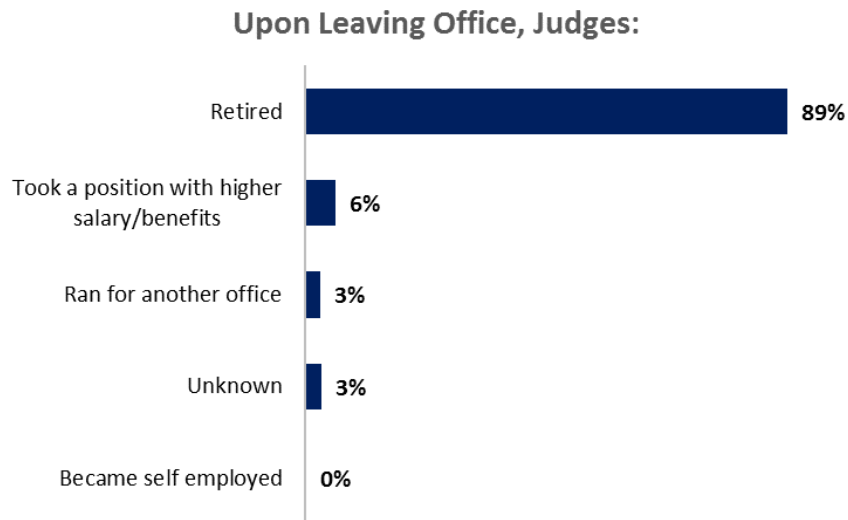

However, 52 percent of judges indicated that salary would have affected the decision to leave the bench.

Next Step for Judges after Resigning or Completing Their Terms

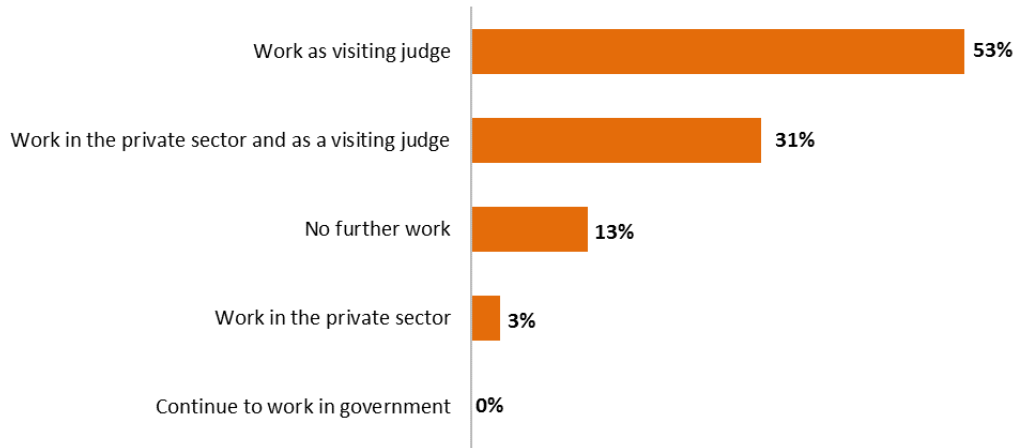

Most of the 36 judges who left voluntarily office during the biennium retired. Nine percent took a position with a better salary or benefits or ran for another office.

Judges who retire from the bench choose different paths, but only 13 percent indicated that they planned no further work. More than of half of the 32 judges who retired planned to continue working as a visiting (or assigned) judge.⁶ Almost one-third planned on serving as a visiting judge in addition to working in the private sector.

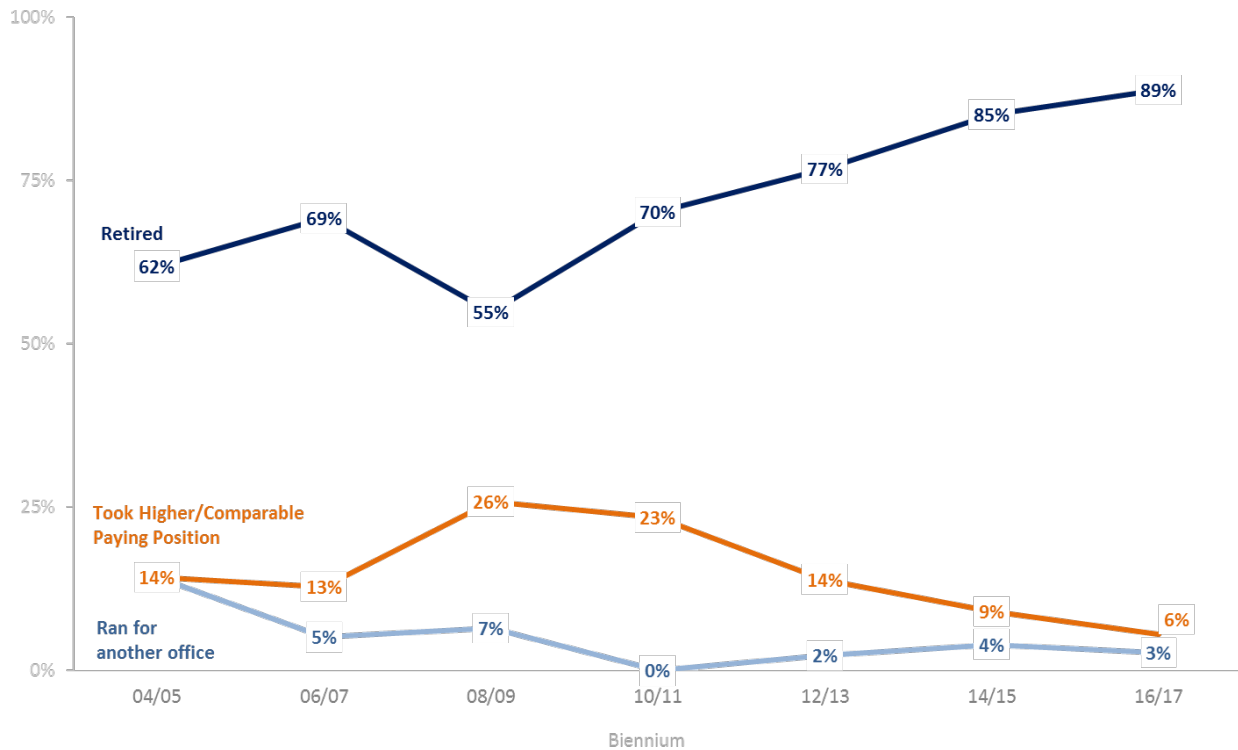

⁶ Tex. Govt. Code § 74.054

Plans of Retired Judges

Of the judges leaving office, the percentage of judges retiring has increased over the last three biennia in relationship to the number of judges taking high/comparable paying positions outside the judiciary or running for another office.

Upon Leaving Office, Judges:

Salaries of Elected State Judges

As of September 1, 2018, the annual state salary of a district judge was $140,000.⁷ State law also authorizes the salaries of district court judges to be supplemented from county funds, up to a total amount that is $5,000 less than the combined salary from state and county sources provided for a justice of a court of appeals.⁸

The annual state salary of a justice of a court of appeals is 110 percent of the annual state salary of a district judge.⁹ State law authorizes salaries of the justices to be supplemented by the counties in each court of appeals district, up to a total amount that is $5,000 less than the state salary paid to a justice of the Supreme Court.¹⁰

The annual state salary of a justice of the Supreme Court or a judge of the Court of Criminal Appeals is 120 percent of the annual state salary of a district judge.¹¹

The chief justice and presiding judge of an appellate court receives $2,500 more than the other justices of the court.¹²

Judges are also entitled to monthly longevity pay equal to 3.1 percent of their current monthly state salary for each year of service credited in the retirement system after completing 16 years of service.¹³ Longevity pay is not included as part of the judge’s or justice’s combined salary from state and county sources for purpose of the salary limitations described above.

Salaries of State Judges in the Six Most Populous States

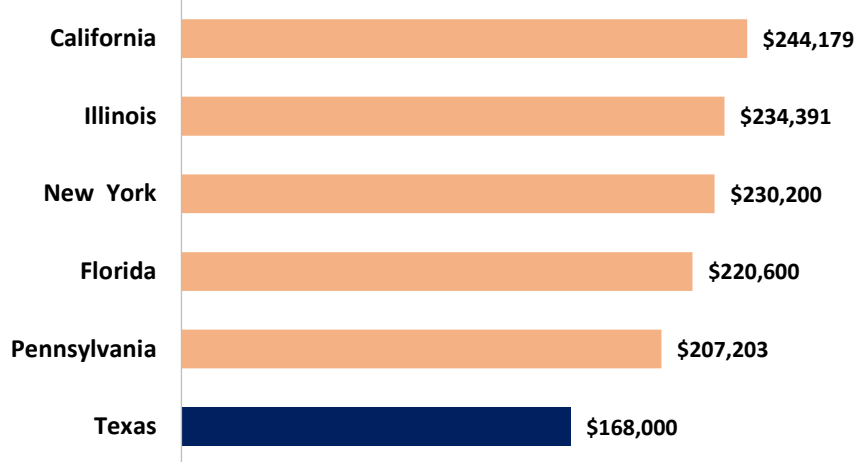

Texas state judges last received an increase in state compensation in September 2013, the first increase since 2005. While Texas’ judicial compensation has remained stagnant, judges in all five of the other most populous states have received increases in salary since 2013.

In addition, the salaries of Texas judges continued to lag the salaries of judges at corresponding levels in all five states closest to Texas in population.

Salaries of Texas Lawyers

Justices and judges for the Supreme Court, Court of Criminal Appeals, and Courts of Appeals are required to have at least 10 years of experience as lawyers.¹⁵ Of Texas' 98 appellate justices and judges, only two justices have been licensed as a lawyer for less than 15 years.¹⁶ Rather, the average length of time since licensure is more than 30 years for the appellate courts.

Judges for the district courts must have at least four years of experience. Only 29 of Texas' 465 district judges have been licensed less than 15 years, and the average length of time since licensure is 30 years.

According to data collected by the Texas Workforce Commission (TWC) for its Texas Wages and Employment Projections, the statewide average salary for all lawyers in 2017 was $145,799, and the average salary for an experienced lawyer was $184,156.¹⁷ TWC defines experienced workers as the wage earned by the upper two-thirds of all workers in the selected occupation.

The state-funded portion of salaries for district judges is less than the average salary for lawyers statewide and significantly less than the average salary for an experienced lawyer. Even though over half of Texas' judges have been licensed attorneys for more than 30 years, no judge is paid a salary that matches the average salary for experienced lawyers in the state.

Appendix A: Purpose and Methodology

Purpose of Report

To provide the Legislature with information to facilitate legislation that ensures that the compensation of state judges is adequate and appropriate, the 79th Texas Legislature charged the Office of Court Administration (OCA) with collecting information relating to state judicial turnover. Section 72.030 of the Texas Government Code requires OCA to:

- 1) obtain data on the rate at which state judges resign from office or do not seek reelection, as well as the reason for these actions; and
- 2) file a report containing this data for the preceding state fiscal biennium with the governor, lieutenant governor, speaker of the house of representatives, and presiding officers of the standing committees of each house of the Legislature with jurisdiction over the judiciary or appropriations.

The report must also include the following findings:

- 1) whether the compensation of state judges exceeds, is equal to, or is less than the compensation of judges at corresponding levels in the five states closest in population to Texas; and
- 2) whether the compensation of state judges exceeds, is equal to, or is less than the average salary of lawyers engaged in the private practice of law.

Methodology

Data for general turnover in the state judiciary for the biennium were compiled from

- notices of resignation and notices of appointment from the Governor's Office,
- election results from the Secretary of State's website,
- surveys sent to departing judges, and
- news articles concerning the departure of judges.

The findings on reasons for voluntary turnover are based on the survey responses of state appellate and district judges who left the state judiciary voluntarily during the period. Designed by OCA staff and reviewed and approved by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, the survey instrument asked respondents to indicate:

- to what extent certain factors influenced their decision to leave their current positions,
- whether certain factors would compel the individual to continue serving as a state judge, and
- what they did immediately after leaving office.

Surveys were sent to each of the appellate and district judges who left the state judiciary voluntarily and did not resign under allegations of misconduct during the biennium. Once OCA received notification about a resignation, a survey was sent to the judge by email, fax, or regular mail. Follow-up notifications, along with another copy of the questionnaire, were sent to judges who had not responded.

Appendix D: Comments from Respondents

Compensation

1. The salary rate for a judge is abysmal! To keep good, qualified lawyers as judges, the salary needs to be double where it is. You cannot expect a lawyer that can earn 10 times the amount of a judge to ever want to run for judge. We are not attracting our brightest lawyers to the bench – we are attracting those that cannot make it as a lawyer, so they become a judge.
2. CCA has been very stable over time, mostly because we held no highly lucrative partnerships at civil law firms to return to. However, when a lawyer at DPS – not general counsel – who was at most a toddler when I became a lawyer, earns $30,000 a year more than a Supreme Court judge, it is not hard to understand why the Supreme Court has had 26 members in the last 18 years. Heads of state agencies make twice as much (and more) as judges! The discrepancy is a clear indication of legislative contempt for the judicial branch – NOT a judicial state agency, as we are often designated in letters from actual state agencies, and exacerbates the issue of the judges whose pension is frozen at the time of retirement versus the judges who receive increased pension benefits when active judges get a raise.
3. Vacation day policies should be set out in definite terms of days or weeks.

Elections

1. Elections should be nonpartisan.
2. While it was only a minor consideration in my decision, the judicial election process in Texas needs to be changed. At a minimum, judicial elections should not be partisan. It would seem axiomatic that the judiciary has no platform or agenda other than the fair/impartial application of the law to the facts. Since Texas continues to allow “straight party” voting, to that extent, a judicial candidate will have votes for and against him/her without regard to ability. That effect is magnified if the election is in a presidential year. One only need look to Harris and Dallas counties to demonstrate the resulting vacillation and the wholesale sweeping in/out of judges – in many instances to the detriment of our justice system.

I believe the best solution would be to develop a fair/impartial appointment system devoid of politics with subsequent retention elections such as the “modified Missouri” plan.

Retirement

1. There comes a time to retire and move on. People can hold these jobs too long! Look at D.C. and federal judges. Turnover is good and necessary. This has been a great job. I have enjoyed the last 24 years and look forward to visiting.
2. I have searched the age where I feel I had the need to spend more time with my family and feel that I can occasionally sit as a visiting judge and keep myself working. I can do this.

Working Conditions

1. I would be more inclined to remain if family law cases were handled by a different, specialized family court as it is in other metropolitan jurisdictions. Civil law and family law are completely different animals; affinity for and expertise in one does not translate to the other. As the population increases, the percentage of our dockets that are family cases, particularly involving pro se litigants, keeps increasing. That not only motivates some judges to leave but also discourages skilled civil litigators from running for the bench.
2. The volume and complexity of appeals, both criminal and civil have greatly increased with no additional justices added to the courts and appeals in 36 years. Electronic filing does not help the quality and the decisions we need more justices to adequately handle the case loads.

Other

3. I did not run for reelection but I am not “retiring” in the sense of receiving my annuity or working less. So, I would say that I am voluntarily leaving the bench to be self-employed (as a mediator or arbitrator) and to serve at times as a visiting judge.
